

Xanthoparmelia semiviridis (F. Muell. ex Nyl.) O.Blanco, A.Crespo, Elix, D.Hawksw. & Lumbsch
[= Chondropsis semiviridis (F.Muell. ex Nyl.) Nyl.]

Lobes linear-elongate, 1-3 mm wide, curling inwards when dry. Upper surface pale yellow to pale yellow-green. Lower surface rugulose, rarely partly canaliculate. Chemistry: usnic acid, fumarprotocetraric acid, succinprotocetraric acid and \pm protocetraric acid; cortex K-, UV-; medulla K+ pale brown, C-, P+ orange-red.

[18957], Australia, New South Wales, 2 km north of Bredbo, 35°55' S, 149°09' E, 760 m, growing loose on soil in open pasture land. Leg. J.A. Elix (10883) & J. Johnston, 24.02.1983. LICHENES AUSTRALASICI EXSICCATI No. 026, distributed as Chondropsis semiviridis (Nyl.) Nyl.

Xanthoparmelia semiviridis

Xanthoparmelia semiviridis

[18957], p286/2

us: usnic acid, pr: protocetraric acid, fpr: fumarprotocetraric acid, su: succinprotocetraric acid;
in B composit spot of pr & su; in C composit spot of fpr & su